Return to Campus Protocols & Resources

September 4, 2020

Dear colleagues,

As we approach the beginning of our Fall term, many of you may be wondering what Sheridan is doing to allow access to campus while safeguarding the health and safety of our learning community.

In order to provide a single and consistent source of information related to our return to campus approach, we are launching the COVID-19 and Return to Campus webpage.

On this site, you will find information regarding:

- Access procedures for employees required to be on campus
- Health & Safety guidelines, along with mask/face-covering requirements and mandatory safety training
- Disclosure and reporting procedures for positive diagnoses or COVID-19 symptoms
- A list of campus services that will be operating
- Frequently Asked Questions, which will be updated regularly

Additionally, you'll find the link to our new COVID-19 Campus Policy that defines the protocol for our gradual return to campus.

Employees who will be attending campus are also required to provide disclosure if they have received a confirmed diagnosis of COVID-19 or have had symptoms consistent with the virus using the Incident Investigation Report. This procedure is similar to what has been implemented at universities and colleges across the country.

We have now completed an analysis of all positions across Sheridan to identify which employees can continue to work remotely and which employees might return to campus in the coming weeks. Non-teaching employees will be informed by their manager as to the likelihood of being assigned to work on campus during the fall semester.

Similar information about campus access and health and safety protocols will be shared with students enrolled in hybrid programs in the next few days.

Thank you for your continuing dedication to our learners, and for doing your part to keep our community safe and healthy.
